

LAURA SCUDDER GRANT CRITERIA AND INSTRUCTIONS

Laura Scudder was a real person! You may only know her name from her famous line of Potato Chips, but she did so much more. She was truly a renaissance woman.

In the early 1900s, while raising her growing family in Northern California and handling her demanding restaurant business, she studied from borrowed books and successfully passed the California Bar Exam. This was even before she had the right to vote.

In Monterey Park, starting in the 1920s, she operated one of the largest woman-owned businesses in the western United States with multiple factories and fleets of trucks. She introduced innovative packaging methods and new manufacturing techniques. She is credited for introducing wax paper bags to keep her potato chips fresh, a technique soon followed by many others. Her early background as a trained nurse helped her to be mindful of producing food products that were healthy and safe.

She ran her business with compassion for her employees. She made sure that she kept her employees working through the difficult Depression years. She was aware of adversity and did what she could to help others. This remarkable woman parlayed a home-grown potato chip business into a multimillion-dollar food empire that at one time, spanned California, Nevada, Arizona and Oregon.

Laura Scudder (1881-1959), was a nurse, attorney and a business woman most famously known for her potato chips. She was a remarkable woman who had a passion to succeed and who believed that happiness came from giving. The Scudder Family is continuing her philosophy of giving by generously awarding this grant.
